Introduction

Marguerite Anna Keasbey's Quaker ancestor, Edward Keasbey, emigrated from England in the late 17th century and settled in Salem, New Jersey. Her grandfather, Edward Keasbey, married Mary Anna Griffith in 1848 and had four children, the eldest of whom was Marguerite's father, Henry Griffith Keasbey. Henry, as a child, moved West in the mid-1850s with his family to Des Moines, Iowa. After the death of his mother in 1860, Henry was sent to Morristown, New Jersey to stay with his uncle. He later married Anna Isabella Griffith in 1877 and had four children, the eldest of whom was Marguerite. He had studied chemistry in Philadelphia and had met Richard V. Mattison, with whom he formed a partnership creating the firm of Keasbey and Mattison, located in Ambler, Pennsylvania. They discovered a new way to insulate pipes with asbestos. Although the firm prospered, Henry left the firm after his wife, Anna, developed tuberculosis. They moved to England and travelled extensively on the European continent until Anna died in 1897 in France. Henry and his daughter Marguerite subsequently spent many years travelling and living in England both before and after World War I. He was a collector of firearms and armor as well as other antiques and had an extensive group of friends in England. He died in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania on May 20, 1932.

On December 10, 1953, Miss Marguerite Anna Keasbey of Morristown, New Jersey, established a Trust creating "The Henry Griffith Keasbey and Anna Griffith Keasbey Memorial Foundation" in memory of her parents. Miss Keasbey, who never married, spent many years accompanying her father as his companion and hostess. As a result of her experiences in England, she felt strongly about the difficulties many British families faced in the post-war years in funding the education of their sons at schools and universities in England, Scotland and Wales, and decided to provide support for them through the creation of the Keasbey Memorial Foundation.

The Trustees of the new Keasbey Memorial Foundation were William Clarke Mason, a partner at the law firm of Morgan, Lewis and Bockius in Philadelphia, and the Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Company. They were given the task of fulfilling the plans set forth by Miss Keasbey in her new Trust by investigating and designing the actual programs and scholarships that were to shape the future of the Foundation's relationship with schools, colleges and universities in Great Britain. After consulting with British educators and with Dr. Harold W. Dodds, the President of Princeton University, a pilot program was established in association with New College, Oxford, and King's, St. John's, and Trinity Colleges in Cambridge.

One-half of the funds from income and principal were to be used "to provide scholarships in Oxford University and Cambridge University in England, and Edinburgh University in Scotland, for English, Scotch and Welsh boys of good education and demonstrated ability who are sons of native-born parents of England, Scotland, or Wales." One-fourth of the funds were "to be used to create maintenance fellowships for the benefit of the British scholarship students" both as undergraduates and, in some instances, as graduate students. In addition, one-fourth of the funds were to be used for "scholarships at Oxford University and Cambridge University in England, and Edinburgh University in Scotland, for American boys of good education and demonstrated ability who are sons of native-born American parents."

Following the death in 1957 of William Clarke Mason, Miss Keasbey's Will, signed on February 13, 1958, confirmed the creation of "The Henry Griffith Keasbey and Anna Griffith Keasbey Memorial Foundation," with John Russell, Jr., J. Tyson Stokes (both of whom were partners at Morgan, Lewis and Bockius) and the Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Company as the three Trustees of the Foundation. One-quarter of the income was to be used for "American boys of good education and demonstrated ability who are sons of native-born American parents" for study at Oxford, Cambridge, the University of London in England, Edinburgh and Aberdeen in Scotland, and a university in Wales. Today, the Foundation is associated with four colleges in Cambridge (King's, Selwyn, St. John's, and Trinity) and six colleges in Oxford (Balliol, Christ Church, Hertford, New College, Trinity, and University) together with the University of Edinburgh and the University of Wales at Aberystwyth. One-half of the funds were to be used "to give scholarships to English, Scotch and Welsh boys of good education and demonstrated ability who are sons of native-born parents in England, Scotland and Wales for study in one or more of the universities named."

In addition, her Will included the provision that one-quarter of the funds were to be used "to give scholarships to English, Scotch and Welsh boys of good education and demonstrated ability who are sons of native-born parents in England, Scotland and Wales for study in such public schools of Great Britain . . . as my Trustees shall decide are the best equipped to develop promising students among the boys of Great Britain to qualify for scholarships in the universities above named." Today, the Foundation is associated with twelve public (in the British sense) schools in England, Scotland, and Wales: Charterhouse, Clifton, Malvern, Marlborough, Oundle, Rugby, Shrewsbury, Tonbridge and Westminster in England; Gordonstoun in Scotland; and Christ College and Llandoverly in Wales.

In her Will, Marguerite Keasbey also noted that she had "come to believe that among the real problems in education in Great Britain and the United States is the maintenance of the highest traditions of the teaching profession in the universities and also in the higher grade schools which produce the material for the universities." As a result of her concern for the teaching profession, John Russell and Tyson Stokes decided to provide the initial endowment to fund a Keasbey Research Fellow in American studies at Selwyn College in Cambridge. The first Keasbey Research Fellow was appointed in 1972 and there have been more than ten Keasbey Research Fellows at Selwyn since then whose fields have included American history, music, literature, law and the philosophy of science.

In 1977, John Russell, Jr. and J. Tyson Stokes retired as Trustees and appointed Angus Russell, then a partner at Morgan, Lewis and Bockius, and Philip J. Greven, Jr., a professor of early American history at Rutgers University, as their successor Trustees. The corporate Trustee is now Wachovia Bank, with David Glickman, the Managing Director of Personal and Charitable Trusts in Philadelphia, as its representative. In the spring of 2006, Angus Russell and Philip Greven plan to retire as Trustees and to appoint as their successors Jay H. Calvert, Jr., a partner at Morgan, Lewis and Bockius LLP in Philadelphia, and Jennifer Jones, a professor of French history at Rutgers University, as their successor Trustees.

During the late 1970s, as more and more colleges and universities, both in the United States and Great Britain, became co-educational, it became clear to the Trustees that changes should be made in Miss Keasbey's Will in order to include women and to change the distribution of funds. On October 16, 1981, the Orphans' Court Division of the Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia County reformed Miss Keasbey's Will to "include all American citizens regardless of sex or parentage" as well as women in the British colleges and universities. The Court also removed the restrictions in terms of distributing the income. No changes were made in terms of boys in the British public schools or the parentage of students in British schools and universities, however.

In the fall of 1955, the first two American Keasbey scholars were sent to study at New College at Oxford University. In the fall of 2005, three new American Keasbey scholars will be sent to Balliol College and Hertford College in Oxford and King's College in Cambridge for two years of study. Between 1955 and 2005, the first fifty years of the Henry Griffith Keasbey and Anna Griffith Keasbey Memorial Foundation's American scholarships for study in Great Britain, a total of 186 scholars have had the opportunity to pursue their academic subjects at universities in Aberystwyth, Cambridge, Edinburgh, London and Oxford. The American scholars have been selected from the following colleges and universities: Swarthmore, Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Williams, Amherst, Dartmouth, Haverford, the Curtis Institute of Music, Cornell, Bowdoin, Brown, Trinity, Wesleyan, Rutgers, Franklin and Marshall, and Middlebury. Each year, four colleges or universities are given the opportunity to nominate three candidates for Keasbey Memorial Foundation scholarships and usually only two or three can be selected for study in Cambridge, Edinburgh, Oxford or Wales. At present, the following American academic institutions are participating in the selection of American Keasbey scholars: Bowdoin, Brown, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, Haverford, Middlebury, Princeton, Swarthmore, Wesleyan and Yale.

Our successor Trustees are hoping that, in the years to come, the funds available for the American Keasbey Memorial Foundation scholarships will be augmented by the generous contributions of our many former scholars, thus enabling the Foundation to provide funding for additional American Keasbey scholars annually. Whether this comes to fruition remains to be seen, but we are confident that the next fifty years of the Henry Griffith Keasbey and Anna Griffith Keasbey Memorial Foundation will prove to be as successful as the first fifty years have been. Surely Miss Marguerite Keasbey, who died on June 29, 1960, would have been pleased with the extraordinary accomplishments of her American and British scholars during the past five decades.
